

Pertinent Paragraphs

We haven't figured it out yet. We knew it would take us a long time to do so. We realized this a few years ago when we were trying to buy a newspaper in Nova Scotia. One of our friends told us at that time: "How can you think of buying a newspaper in Nova Scotia, when you don't know how many fish they grow to the acre?"

Here in our "Best Climate on Earth" or "Heaven on Earth" as some put it, we find a mixture of Banana Belt philosophy and Fish Stories, a real puzzler.

But we never suspected that Andy Benson and George Casteel could be influenced by these conditions. We soon realized that the south-west captivated van Gilse and MacQueen when the first fish stories started coming in.

Now we ask our readers to help us puzzle this out.

According to Andy Benson, all he knows is what George Casteel taught him. Now here is the story:

Andy was working in his banana orchard (or is the term banana garden?) at noon when George came from the office for his noon siesta. After siesta, when George was preparing to go back to the office, Andy was still working and enjoying the warm sunshine and cool breezes of our "Heaven on Earth" when George remarked: "Don't you know that you do that kind of work in the morning fog?"

If we were a native and knew all about ocean fishing, we might be able to puzzle this thing out. For the benefit of the 9999 newcomers in Lemon Grove, we think van Gilse and MacQueen should explain the yellowtail fishing principles. Being a newcomer, we don't want to give the wrong impression and give the wrong kind of advice.

Knowing nothing at all about deep sea fishing or growing bananas, here is the story as it looks to us. All you have to do in this "Best Climate on Earth" is to proceed as follows: In the morning fog you cultivate your banana garden. A few hours of work here is sufficient for a comfortable living. (Who is interested in money anyhow? Maybe lowbrow bankers?) Then, as soon as the sun disperses the fog clouds you go deep sea fishing. And the way we understand it the San Diego Chamber of Commerce gives you a prize for every Yellowtail you catch.

For the benefit of the uninitiated we explain here that a yellowtail is a fish, about 5 ft. long on the average, weighing over 30 lbs. Write to our housekeeping department or the latest menus on yellowtail and bananas.

BANK OFFICIALS ARE HONORED AT LIONS CLUB MEETING

Nearly one hundred people representing all groups of business and professional men in Lemon Grove sat down to a sumptuous ham dinner at the V. F. W. hall on Thursday, April 28th.

It was the regular Thursday supper meeting of the Lemon Grove Lions Club and the guests were First National Bank officials and local business and professional men. Mr. Andy T. Benson, president of the Lemon Grove Lions Club, disposed of business matters in quick order and then called on Lion van Gilse to act as Master of Ceremonies. Mr. van Gilse, with an uncanny memory for faces and names and business interests, introduced the business men to the bankers and then the bankers to the business men.

Mr. van Gilse called on Mr. Harold M. Rove, vice president; and manager of branches to introduce the speakers.

Mr. Anderson Northwick, executive vice president of the bank, was the first speaker. He thanked the Lions and the business men of Lemon Grove for the welcome received and gave credit for having the bank located here to Mr. George W. Casteel who convinced the bank to make a survey of Lemon Grove. When Mr. Casteel's figures were found to be correct, the comptroller of currency issued a certificate to open a branch bank.

Mr. Northwick pointed out that it had been difficult to decide on the banking needs when population estimates had varied from 7900 to 15,000 for the district tributary to the bank.

It has been decided to provide a full banking service at Lemon Grove the same as at the main

These appointments were announced during "First National Bank Night" which was observed at the last meeting of the Lemon Grove Lions Club with Andy T. Benson, president, presiding.

Borthwick emphasized, in his talk before the Lions Club, that "Branch offices of the First National are encouraged to operate as independent offices and as an integral part of the community. The Lemon Grove branch has been staffed with experienced and competent personnel who will have full authority to operate sound banking facilities to fit the needs of this trade area," he said.

Start Work On Community Center

Last Saturday three citizens of Lemon Grove, viz: Chris Ferguson, Herman Domke and Tom Moore donated their time to clear away the fence and other obstructions on the building site of the new Community Center building. Thus the honor of being the first of many public spirited citizens of this area to actually contribute their physical efforts to this worthy cause, goes to those before mentioned.

Line and grade stakes were placed by the surveyors of the county Monday morning and now the grading and leveling will be done by other friends who have volunteered their services and equipment for this purpose.

Most of the organizations of the community are in favor of and working for the success of this undertaking. If you wish to do your share either by work or donation please phone to Ted Haaf H 6-3568 listing what kind of work you can do and whether on week ends or otherwise.

Much of the work necessary to construct this building has already been subscribed but more is necessary. This should be a real community effort by all our citizens. So why not phone the necessary information to the above phone at once, and help in a worthy cause.

THIS AND THAT

by Dr. Frank Weege, D. C.

Seventh Principle: Food is a major factor in the cause and cure of disease. The statement has often been made that we are to a large extent what food makes us. It furnishes the various elements that feed the body, and our physical and mental, and even moral status is to a large extent controlled by the character and quantity of food.

Eighth Principle: Water is more essential to life than food. We can live longer without food elements than we can without water. Two-thirds of the weight of the body is water, and water is the universal solvent that enables the life processes to be carried on. The great danger in the use of water is underdrinking. Water carries waste materials from the body. When too little water is taken, dangerous wastes will be retained in the body.

Ninth Principle: Thorough mastication of food is essential to health. Too many soft, pasty, mushy foods should not be used, neither should foods be ground or milled fine. Foods that are good to prevent constipation are usually good also to encourage mastication, though this is not always true. Hasty eating and bolting one's food without mastication is a prevalent cause of indigestion.

Tenth Principle: Meat is adapted to use as a food with certain reservations. Meat does not always combine satisfactorily with the other foods with which it is eaten. If you want to eat meat, the more nearly you make your meal on meat alone, the more easily it will digest. Meat, as a rule, is more inclined to fill the tissues with foreign elements or poisons than vegetarian foods, although a meatless diet is less stimulating.

Science has as its chief function the accurate interpretation of Nature's law. Yet science at many stages of its history has tried, and in certain fields of investigation still sometimes tries, to quarrel with Nature and substitute for the obvious principles of life complicated man-made theories.

It is often said that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. But it is also true that too much technical knowledge may be a dangerous thing. Such knowledge may fill a man with conceit in his own book wisdom and with contempt for the really greater wisdom of those who, with less specialized knowledge, have taken pains to observe the actual facts of life and nature.

Nothing has better illustrated the conceit and blindness of technical science than its disregard of the principles of the physical culturists. Yet it should be said to the credit of the scientists that when, in their own way, they find out the truth, they abandon their errors more readily than other types of minds.

This has been strikingly illustrated by the complete change that has taken place in the viewpoint of nutritional scientists in regard to the superior value of natural foods as compared with diets made up on the basis of chemical knowledge.

At the present time the world elements. But it is still unwilling of orthodox science and medicine to accept the more general and has fully accepted the fact that more important truths of the certain diseases are caused by relation of food as a whole to lack of particular vitamins in health and vitality as a whole. the diet, or by other deficiencies (Continued next week)

"SMART GIRLS DON'T TALK"

WITH THREE STARS.

COMING

Three stars, Virginia Mayo,

Bruce Bennett and Robert Hutton, share honors in Warner

Bros.' fast-moving melo-drama,

"Smart Girls Don't Talk", which opens next Sunday at the Grove

Theatre. Several segments of big city life are interwoven into this story—the two-fisted kind.

Miss Mayo plays the role of a financially embarrassed daughter of high society. Bennett is an intelligent and ruthless gambler, a new departure for him on the screen. Richard

Rober, from the Broadway stage, plays a detective lieutenant of the homicide squad. His part calls for romantic interludes with Miss Mayo in addition to the more dramatic sequences.

Hutton plays Miss Mayo's

younger brother in the film graduating from youthful assignments to the more mature role. Helen Westcott and Tom

D'Andra are also in support.

564 QUESTION:WHICH

GADGET TAKES PICTURES?

Henry Morgan's newness to motion pictures kept the crew of

United Artists' "So This Is New York" in a state of continual amusement.

His first go before the cameras, Morgan found himself confused by all the apparatus used in picture making. When director Dick Fleischer tried to get a shot of him looking directly into the camera lens, it took five takes before he followed directions. Morgan looked everywhere but at the lens, usually at a baby spot, the microphone or the camera finder.

Finally he confessed: "I don't know what lens you mean. I

I thought that all these gadgets

take pictures."

"So This Is New York" opens

Friday at the Grove Theatre. An Enterprise Studios' film, it features Virginia Grey and Dona Drake.

Y'S MEN DISCUSS COMMUNITY SERVICE

Community service projects came in for a good share of the attention at the International Y's Men's Coastal Section Spring convocation held in Inglewood last Saturday (April 23). Lemon Grove representatives were A. H. Thomas, Reverend Dan Apra who was accompanied by Mrs. Apra, and William Poirier of the County YMCA staff.

A feature of the program was an address of Dean Cromwell, former U.S.C. Athletic director, who coaches the 1948 U.S. Olympic track team to its great success. He was introduced by E. W. Dean, publisher of the Inglewood Daily News.

Marion Keller, International Director of the Coastal Section of Y's Men, outlined the many service projects of the Y's Men's Clubs throughout the section. The Lemon Grove Club, one of the newest, he pointed out, has supplied time and money to a variety of youth projects. At present the club, which conducts meetings at the Community Church, is remodeling a garage for Hi-Y and Gra-Y Club groups.

LADIES ONLY!

Walter's Jewelry takes this opportunity to extend our best wishes to the Mothers and Wives of this community and sincerely hope this Mother's Day will be one of your happiest.

P.S. We will remain open Friday evenings until 9 P.M. This will be an opportunity to send your husband in for your Mother's Day gift.
